

Course Delivery Methods

School of Computing, Informatics, and Decision Systems Engineering

There are four types of course delivery methods: ASU Online, In-Person, Hybrid, and iCourse. When you are searching the schedule of classes you will see the course delivery method. Not all courses have every method available. Please see below for a description of each.

ASU Online: ASU Online courses are intended for students in an online program. Industrial Engineering offers an online program and an on-campus program. Computer Science and Computer Engineering are on-campus programs. Students enrolled in an on-campus program are allowed to request permission to enroll in an ASU Online course by submitting an override request via the link: <https://fultonapps.asu.edu/override/>. There is an additional fee of $1206 per course associated with ASU Online courses taken by students who are not in an online program. If you are not in an online program you will not automatically be able to see available ASU Online courses in the schedule of classes. To view ASU Online courses you will need to log out of your MyASU and search the schedule of classes through the link on the ASU home page. <https://webapp4.asu.edu/catalog/>. If you have any questions regarding the administration of the online courses, you may direct your questions to Angela Harguess at student-fseonline@asu.edu.

In-Person: In-Person courses are standard courses that meet one, two, or three times a week in a scheduled room at ASU.

Hybrid: Hybrid courses are a combination of in-person meetings and online assignments. When you register for a hybrid course your list of enrolled classes on your MyASU will show it as an iCourse. However, you will notice there is no additional fee reflected in your bill. As long as the course is listed as a hybrid in the ASU Schedule of Classes then you will not be charged the iCourse fee.

iCourse: An iCourse is an online course intended for students who are not enrolled in an online program. These courses carry a $1206 additional fee per course. The entire course is delivered online. There is no scheduled in-person meeting time associated with these courses.

International Students Please Note: According to ISSO only three (3) credit hours of online/distance learning classes may be applied towards full-time requirement per semester. ASU Online and iCourses are considered online/distance learning classes. Hybrid and in-person courses are not considered online/distance learning classes. However, if you are being sponsored by your home country we recommend you check with your sponsors guidelines with taking hybrid and/or online courses.